Marketing-compliance pass over stocks-preview-v2.html (funded / prop-trading landing page).

Summary

The most serious issues share one root cause: the page promises an unconditional "get your fee back, risk nothing" deal that the page's own pricing and disclosures contradict. Reconciling the hero, security-deposit, and how-it-works language with the rebate callout resolves most of the exposure. One regulatory statement (PDT rule) is currently inaccurate and must be corrected. Severity legend: C = Critical, H = High, M = Medium, L = Lower.

Critical — fix before production

C 1. "Refund your fee when you pass" contradicts your own pricing

Location: Hero badges (~L1077/1089/1096); How-it-works (~L1724); badge (~L1392); security-deposit (~L1743-1756)

Concern: Hero, how-it-works and the security-deposit section say the evaluation fee is returned on passing. The rebate callout says the opposite: Growth gets NO rebate, and Express rebates only $800 of $899 on the first qualifying payout (not on pass), and is not guaranteed. A blanket "we refund your fee when you pass" is false for Growth and materially overstated for Express.

Fix: Replace all "refund your fee when you pass" language with the accurate, conditional rebate terms used in the rebate callout. Align hero + how-it-works + security-deposit to: Express = $800 of $899 rebated on first qualifying payout (not guaranteed); Growth = no rebate.

C 2. The "$1,499" security-deposit figure matches no real price

Location: Security-deposit section (~L1749-1756)

Concern: The graphic states "Evaluation deposit $1,499.00 ... $1,499 in. $1,499 back when you pass." No plan costs $1,499 (Growth $399, Express $899). Presenting a fictional fee that is fully returned misrepresents both the cost and the partial, conditional rebate.

Fix: Use real figures ($399 / $899) and the real rebate mechanics, or make the graphic plan-agnostic with no invented dollar amount.

C 3. "Security deposit / we hold it / we return it / SECURED" conflicts with the General Disclosure

Location: Security-deposit section (~L1743-1756); General Disclosure (~L2505)

Concern: The disclosure states TradeFundrr "does not hold customer funds or securities," but the security-deposit metaphor (vault, SECURED, held, we return it) implies custody and return of client money. Recharacterizing a largely non-refundable fee as a returnable deposit is internally contradictory and a deceptive-characterization risk.

Fix: Drop the custodial framing (held / SECURED / we return it). Describe the fee accurately as a non-refundable evaluation fee with a conditional rebate on first qualifying payout (Express only).

C 4. PDT rule stated as already repealed — currently inaccurate

Location: Glossary (~L2035); risk-math card (~L1694)

Concern: Copy says the PDT rule "has since been repealed" / "is gone." As of May 29, 2026 the change is approved (SEC, Apr 14, 2026) but not yet effective (June 4, 2026), brokers implement through Oct 2027, and the $25K minimum is being replaced by a ~$2,000 risk-based minimum — not eliminated outright. Stating it as already repealed is a material misstatement of regulatory fact.

Fix: Correct to current status or remove the regulatory claim. Do not state the $25K minimum is gone until it is effective and implemented; avoid implying "no minimum."

High — earnings & outcome claims

H 5. Specific monthly-income figures presented as attainable

Location: Time-tax section (~L1377,1408,1429,1453); Two-paths (~L1734)

Concern: Phrases like "earning $3K-$5K/mo from Week 1," "life-changing income/profits," and "collecting weekly checks" present specific income outcomes. These are a classic enforcement target in funded-trading marketing and are contradicted by the non-guarantee language elsewhere.

Fix: Soften to clearly hypothetical/illustrative, remove "from Week 1" certainty, and add a proximate disclaimer that figures are illustrative and results are not typical or guaranteed.

H 6. "Without risking a dime / a single dollar of your own money"

Location: Time-tax (~L1453); narrative (~L1469)

Concern: Traders pay real, largely non-refundable money ($399/$899 + $99/mo + $149 activation), so they are risking the fees. The claim is false on its face.

Fix: Remove the "risk nothing" phrasing; state that the only amount at stake is the (largely non-refundable) program fees.

H 7. "Most traders pass in 2-8 weeks"

Location: How-it-works (~L1724)

Concern: An unsubstantiated pass-rate / outcome claim.

Fix: Remove, or substantiate with documented, current internal data and date-stamp it.

Medium

M 8. T3 partner entity naming

Location: Hero + T3 block (~L2563); disclosure + two-paths footnote

Concern: The body credits "T3 Global" as a "regulated SEC broker-dealer and FINRA/SIPC member," but the actual member is named "T3 Trading Group, LLC" elsewhere. Inconsistent entity naming risks implying the wrong entity is the regulated broker-dealer.

Fix: Name the regulated entity precisely and consistently; ensure neither TradeFundrr nor "T3 Global" is implied to itself be the broker-dealer.

M 9. Hero payout claim stated absolutely

Location: Hero (~L1071)

Concern: "Keep 80% of profits, paid every Friday" is stated without reference to the rules, caps, and eligibility detailed later.

Fix: Add "subject to program rules, payout caps and eligibility."

M 10. Hypothetical charts lack a proximate disclaimer

Location: Time-tax and capital-gap visuals

Concern: These are forward-looking, simulated illustrations; the CFTC hypothetical-performance disclaimer sits only at the page bottom.

Fix: Add a short "illustrative / hypothetical, not a prediction" note adjacent to each chart.

Lower / already in good shape

L 11. Testimonials — keep a visible 'results not typical' note

Location: Reviews section

Concern: Reviews are now real verbatim Trustpilot quotes (good) and a Testimonial Disclosure exists, but outcome claims appear in the cards.

Fix: Add a short "individual results, not typical" line visible near the reviews, not only in the legal footer. Verify the 4.2/5 and 66+ count are current.

Already satisfactory: rebate callout is carefully worded with the non-guarantee language; General / Risk / CFTC hypothetical-performance / Testimonial disclosures are all present; the "Mockup - Not live" banner is in place (remove before launch).
